The first, second and third of these, which are the most important, are the following: 1. The first is the fact that the human mind is not a blank slate, but is filled with ideas and impressions from the moment of birth. 2. The second is the fact that the human mind is not a passive receiver of impressions, but is an active interpreter of them. 3. The third is the fact that the human mind is not a single entity, but is composed of many different faculties and powers, each of which has its own sphere of activity and its own mode of operation. These three facts are the foundation of all psychology, and they are the basis of all the theories and systems of thought which have been developed in this science.

The first of these facts is the most important, and it is the one which has been most generally recognized. It is the fact that the human mind is not a blank slate, but is filled with ideas and impressions from the moment of birth. This fact is the basis of all the theories of heredity and of the influence of the environment on the development of the mind. It is the fact which has led to the discovery of the laws of inheritance, and it is the fact which has led to the discovery of the laws of the influence of the environment on the development of the mind.

The second of these facts is the fact that the human mind is not a passive receiver of impressions, but is an active interpreter of them. This fact is the basis of all the theories of the mind as a faculty of interpretation, and it is the fact which has led to the discovery of the laws of the mind as a faculty of interpretation. It is the fact which has led to the discovery of the laws of the mind as a faculty of interpretation, and it is the fact which has led to the discovery of the laws of the mind as a faculty of interpretation.

The third of these facts is the fact that the human mind is not a single entity, but is composed of many different faculties and powers, each of which has its own sphere of activity and its own mode of operation. This fact is the basis of all the theories of the mind as a collection of faculties and powers, and it is the fact which has led to the discovery of the laws of the mind as a collection of faculties and powers.

The first of these facts is the most important, and it is the one which has been most generally recognized.
